

The self-archive process is an activity developed by the author because the author characterizes the contents deposited and accepted the conditions of the distribution license.

The self-archive can be associated with an institution or a community and it is within this circle that the author will gather information to deposit their scientific production. In the institutional repositories context, only the production carried out within the institution may be deposited.